

Call for Proposals: Sustainable Living- Volume 8 Action & Insights Case Study Book

Introduction:

To achieve the sustainable development goals, both the developed and developing countries need to focus on sustainable living. Sustainable living is about lifestyle choices. It is a broader topic than environmental resource management and personal resource management, as it also looks at human development and the interaction between humans and the environment they live in. This includes the technology environment we have created. Sustainable living focuses on personal living and work life management. The need for individual and societal consumer choices, the freedom to choose, the information that is available, and the role of government policy in regulating that choice and minimizing the negative effects of human development is a tense one.
