This post offers the opportunity to provide research leadership and deliver impactful teaching in a supportive and collegial environment.

You should ideally have a PhD in any aspect of International Business or any equivalent field. You should be able to demonstrate a track record in researching and publishing on any aspect of international business, or related field. You should also be able to demonstrate evidence of teaching excellence at both undergraduate and postgraduate level as you will contribute to courses across the BSc and MSc programmes in International Business and Management as well as the PhD programme.

We are looking to recruit a Senior Lecturer in International Business on our Research and Teaching pathway to strengthen this Subject Development Group in the Management Department within the School of Business, Economics and Informatics, Birkbeck, University of London, following a period of growth and continuing success. You will be working alongside proactive colleagues in a supportive and congenial environment.

MENU

The successful candidate will be:

- committed to excellence in teaching primarily in the field of international business,
- committed to excellence in research. The ideal candidate will have published in high quality international business journals or journals in related fields,
- interested in impact generating and public engagement activities, including the participation in the international business community, and
- able to work collegially, with strong interpersonal, organisational and administration skills, in order to effectively manage research and teaching teams.

Remuneration

Grade 9 of the College's London Pay Scale which is £56,349 rising to £62,925 per annum.

The salary quoted is on the College's London Pay Scale which includes a consolidated Weighting/Allowance which applies only to staff whose normal contractual place of work is in the London area.
